FIX PEACE "SLATE"

INFORMAL CONFERENCES OF FOREIGN MINISTERS BEING HELD

MEET IN HISTORIC PLACE

Regarded as Almost Certain Inter-Allied Council Will Be Held at the Famous City of Versailles.

Paris, Nov. 16.—Meetings beginning today of representatives of the associated governments will be largely of an informal nature. They will consist chiefly of conferences of foreign ministers rather than of premiers, with a view to reaching a common understanding on international questions and definitely arranging the program of the peace congress.

Versailles, although not formally chosen as the meeting place of the peace negotiations, is regarded as almost certain to be the place selected for the peace conference when the inter-Allied council reassembled today. The real work of the negotiations will be carried on in Paris, where it is probable that delegations from all the countries will reside temporarily, the members going out to Versailles now and then for plenary sessions of the conference.

There also is little doubt that the supreme act of signing the peace agreement will take place at Versailles in the same historical hall where the German empire was proclaimed in 1871.

Versailles, or rather the palace there, has played an important part in the histories of France, Germany, Great Britain and the United States. In 1783 the armistice preliminary to the treaty of peace between Great Britain and the United States was signed at Versailles. Six years later the palace was the scene of important events in the French revolution. The German army besieging Paris had its headquarters in the town in 1870-71, and there the negotiations between France and Germany were discussed. After the peace Versailles was the seat of the French national assembly and for a few years thereafter was the official capital of France.

Is Historic Place.

The town of Versailles, twelve miles west-southwest of Paris, is not attractive in itself, but the presence there of the palace built by Louis XIV and its proximity to the capital and the gardens which, with the fountains and waterworks, are one of the glories of the place, were planned by Le Notre. All estimates of the cost of the buildings and gardens are vague, but some experts estimate that more than $100,000,000 was spent by Louis XIV, who destroyed the accounts.

In the French revolution, Louis XIV and Marie Antoinette were forcibly removed to Paris, after which the furniture was destroyed. Napoleon and the kings during the restoration barely kept the place in repair, but Louis Philippe restored the palace and made it a museum of works of art, illustrative of the history of France, at a cost of nearly $5,000,000.

PLAN CHURCH UNION

NINE PROTESTANT CHURCHES TO CONFER WITH PRESBYTERIANS

'A WISE MOVE'-REV. COILE

Maryville Pastor Points Results of Unified Command in War as Worth Attention of the Church.

Announcement was made yesterday in the Metropolitan press of the country that committees from nine of the leading Protestant denominations of the United States will meet in Philadelphia December 3-6 to take the first steps toward the "organic union of the evangelical churches in America." These nine have accepted the invitation extended by the Presbyterian church to all evangelical churches to a convention for working out a plan to make one federated church of all these denominations.

The denominations which will be represented at the conference are the Presbyterian church, Protestant Episcopal church, Reformed church United Presbyterian church, Methodist Episcopal church, Congregational churches Disciples of Christ, Evangelical Synod of North America and Moravian church

With several Maryville denominations interested in the question of church union Dr. S. A. Coile of the Presbyterian church was asked this morning for an expression in the matter. Dr. Coile said:

"This is one of the most important movements in America today, a first result of unified thought, feeling and life, brought about by the great war. The war was won only when the Allied armies were placed under unified command. Its results are to be conserved by plans of unified statesmanship. The churches of Protestant America will be wise as they follow the pathway so plainly pointed out by every other movement, national or international, economic or social, secular or religious having for its object the influencing or the welfare of any large part of humanity.

"It is hoped, however, that as progress is made others will join in, until the result will be the practical reunion of the Protestant evangelical churches of America.

"Three of our local churches are especially interested in this movement. One has only to consider for a moment to realize the mighty force for righteousness in Maryville and Nodaway county which would lie in one great church composed of these three with a great preacher, an efficient organization and the financial strength to enable it to do anything which God's spirit might move it to undertake."

Washington, Nov. 16.—The war department's plan for demobilizing the 1,700,000 men in the camps and cantonments of the country was outlined today by General March, chief of staff.

Over Seas for Freedom.

LET us be glad together that the passionate love of freedom that made the Pilgrim Fathers set sail in fragile ships to brave the unknown terrors of the inhospitable New England coast is driving us back over the seas in dreadnaughts to face the known horrors of modern warfare.

When that spirit dies there can be no more thanksgiving in America. As long as this spirit lives it is always Thanksgiving day, whatever happens, or whatever we may have or may not have for dinner.

Let us give thanks that years of prosperity and fatness, years of peace and security, have not served to make us entirely forgot that unless we love freedom more than life, we are already as one dead; unless we know the difference between real peace and selfish security, we are already a conquered people.

Let us give thanks for our strength, our wealth and our opportunities garnered under the protection of even a dawning democracy, and for the chance to pour them out without stint for the spread of democracy to every corner of our world.

Pages of History Filled With Record of Days Set Aside for Giving Thanks.

THE idea is prevalent throughout the United States that our Thanksgiving day is peculiarly an American custom of New England origin. This is true in part only. The general observance through many years of a set day on which to give thanks to Almighty God for his blessings has made the custom distinctively American; but its origin long antedates the settlement of this western continent and we must look elsewhere for it.

In old Egypt, when the harvest had been gathered, it was the custom to observe a day of feasting and to lay offerings upon the altars of Isis, the goddess of agriculture. The Jewish festival was the "Ingathering," or the "Feast of the Tabernacle," mentioned in Exodus and other parts of the Old Testament. This was more particularly a thanksgiving for the fruit harvest, but as it came at the close of the entire harvest it probably was intended also as a general thanksgiving "for the bounty of nature."

The goddess of the Roman harvest was Ceres. Her festival was celebrated annually and was called Ceralia. It was a day of worship and rustic sports. Men and women formed processions and went to the fields with music.

In one way or another, a Thanksgiving day had been observed in Christian Europe for centuries before its celebration in New England. The early Christians kept such days as the bishops named them within their jurisdiction. On the continent, and for a time in England, it occurred at Martinmas, which was a day of feasting and drinking. Occasionally, too, civic authorities recommended the observance of some fixed day.

Real Day of Thanksgiving.

There is a difference between being thankful and having a good time. One can enjoy an elaborate dinner and the meeting of friends without any uplift of the heart to the Giver of all good. Make Thanksgiving more than a jolly day, a day of festivity and good cheer and friendly companionship. Put aside a portion of it for real Thanksgiving to him to whom your thanks are due.

A Maryville miss was talking to a soldier the other day. The doughboy wore his chin strap. "I suppose its to keep your hat on," ventured the miss. "No," replied the Yank, "its to rest the jaw after answering questions."

A certain Maryville woman is so modest that she blushes when she has to use the slang name for illicit liquor peddling. She refers to it as "bootlimbing."

Of course the ban on goods "Made in Germany" is not going to extend to the German helmets the boys are sending home.

The weather man says a cold wave is on the way. This bit of news is important as a warning to the girls that it is time to put away their summer furs and get out their winter extra low cut waists.

A reader of this column asks "what is a 'kilowatt' as used by the electric company. We are glad to give the information. A kilowatt is a cross between a buzz saw and cockle burr. It resembles a wart and in warm weather it smells like a Hun. It has a habit of swelling out like a quart of rice in a pint cooking vessel. It is a cousin to the water meter. The latter has a habit of slopping over. It has been known when detached for repairs, to measure up 6,000,000 gallons while being taken to the repair shop. Still a kilowatt is a handy thing to have in a family where milk is scarce. It can also be used as a tack hammer in putting down carpets. It is not a safe thing for the baby to play with and keep it out of reach of the cat.

One of our subscribers takes the presiding elder of this circuit to task for advocating the use of whisky as an antidote for influenza, and maybe he's right. We are of the same opinion still, for we refuse to believe that any self-respecting flu germ would for a moment think of taking up its abode in a place where the fumes of the kind of whisky sold in Maryville is found. We wouldn't if we were a flu germ, would you?

HOW RHEUMATISM BEGINS

The excruciating agonies of rheumatism are usually the result of failure of the kidneys to expel poisons from the system. In a majority of cases rheumatism is an indication that uric acid has pervaded the system. If the irritation of these uric acid crystals is allowed to continue, incurable bladder or kidney disease may result. Attend to it at once. Don't resort to temporary relief. The sick kidneys must be restored to health by the use of some sterling remedy which will prevent a return of the disease.

Get some GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules immediately. They are a standard world-famous medicine in use for over two hundred years. They have brought back the joys of life to countless thousands of sufferers from rheumatism, lame back, lumbago, sciatica, gall stones, gravel and other affections of the kidneys, liver, stomach, bladder and allied organs.

They will attack the poisons at once, clear out the kidneys and urinary tract and the soothing healing oils and herbs will restore the inflamed tissues and organs to normal health.

GOLD MEDAL is the original Haarlem Oil imported direct from the home laboratories in Haarlem, Holland, by the Genuine Haarlem Oil Mfg. Co., Haarlem, Holland, American office, 116 Beekman St., N. Y.

All others are imitations. Ask for GOLD MEDAL and be sure the name GOLD MEDAL is on the box. Three sizes, at all good druggists. Adv.

Eating for Health.

Observance of the principles of right eating is the very keystone of health.

By a well regulated natural life, we can keep our bodies in such a condition that they will resist disease.

Four-fifths of all disease is caused primarily by either over-eating or eating wrong combinations of food.

Over-eating causes the formation in the system of uric acid, ptomaine and other poisonous compounds.

It is the accumulation of these poisons in the body that makes one feel tired and fatigued; also produces a nervous, irritable, debilitated condition.

When food is properly masticated, the inclination to over-eat is prevented

The practice of eating hurriedly and washing down food by liquids, without proper mastication, is a great weakness of the American people.

The quantity of food required by the body is regulated by physical activity.

Therefore, he who seeks health should not eat a lumberjack's ration, when he follows a sedentary occupation.—By Dr. Lorne A. Summers.

HINDENBURG CALLS ON ARMY

Declares He Will Not Abandon Troops in Crisis and Demands Faithfulness.

Berlin, Nov. 16.—via Basel, Nov. 14.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg has issued a proclamation to the German army saying in substance:

"The ever growing number of our enemies, the exhaustion of our Allies and the urgent crisis in the provisioning of our country have forced us to accept the hard conditions of the armistice. By the terms of the armistice we are obliged to rapidly return to the fatherland, which is a heavy task.

"You will never be abandoned by your field marshal in the struggle. He will ever be confident in you."

The order of the field marshal reads: "To all, and especially the army group under Field Marshal von Mackensen (in Rumania) I remain as hitherto the head of the supreme army command in order to lead the troops home in order and discipline. I expect the command, staffs, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men to continue to do their duty. This is to be made known to all the troops."

What Did He Do For Denver?

The late Senator Tabor built the Tabor Grand opera house at Denver some 30 years ago. He employed an Italian artist to decorate the interior, with the understanding that he (Tabor) was not to enter the theater until the work was completed. Over the center of the proscenium was a picture of Shakespeare.

On the tour of inspection in company with the artist, Senator Tabor said: "Whose picture is that?" The artist replied: "Shakespeare." "Shakespeare! What in hell did he ever do for Denver? You paint him out and paint me in."—From Portland Oregonian.

Censored.

The troubles of a society editor in a small city are reflected in the following item which appeared in a Brazil, (Ind.) newspaper.

Miss Cleopatra Grub entertained at bridge whist and dancing yesterday afternoon. The first prize in cards was won by Miss————(censored because she is leader of the Methodist choir). The second prize was captured by Miss————(Kept out because she teaches in the public schools). Consolation prize was taken by Miss——— (Kept out by special request. Her mother objects to cards).

Among those present were Miss——(Kept out because of death in family recently), Miss ————(censored because her employer objects to dancing), Miss——— (omitted by request. She had refused another invitation for the same afternoon, and really it would be quite embarassing if hostess No. 1 were to 'catch on'), and Mrs. ——— (husband is out of work and she does not want to appear extravagant.)

JACK'S MOTHER

By ROSE HOLMES.

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Of course, Jack is the dearest fellow in the world, but he often refers to his mother's efficiency. Jack's mother is efficient. I'll admit it. I would also call her stin—economical.

Since the slogan "Get Behind Hoover" has become popular it seems to me that Jack has referred more frequently to the efficiency of his mother; has several times intimated that saving a little on living expenses would be a laudable ambition for me. This idea was put in words that I understood, when he said:

"My dear, I think $45 too much for you to spend on a hat this season."

So I didn't spend it. I got a perfectly-good-enough best hat for $35, and in order to make it last longer I got one that was all right for everyday for $20.

But that isn't what I started to tell you about. You see, we go over to Jack's mother's for dinner on her birthday, and this year was to be no exception.

I knew she would show us her preserves and pickles and cans of things; and her last winter's suit that she had made as good as new with the addition of new collar and cuffs.

And I happened to think that my sweater was dirty, and that I would want to wear it under my coat if we motored over; and also happened to think that the fact that it was dirty would not escape efficiency's eye.

Well, cleaning is expensive, and didn't Jack want me to economize? Hadn't I paid the most reliable cleaning establishment in Boston $1.75 plus expressage, for cleaning that same sweater not long ago?—a perfectly exorbitant price; why, the sweater only cost $12.50 in the first place. No, it wasn't one of those expensive hand-knit ones, but it was a very pretty sweater. Yes, that soft rose one you have seen me wear.

They say "a penny saved is a penny earned," so I decided that I couldn't earn $1.75 any easier than to wash that sweater myself, with about five cents' worth of soap.

Did you ever try to wash anything? We've always sent the washing out, so haven't any tubs or wringers or things, but there was a bathtub. I believe one of the helps to efficiency is being able to utilize the things.

It takes a lot of energy to get up a suds in a bathtub, if you are not on the inside.

Do you know how much a sweater weighs when it's wet?

I soaped and rubbed and squeezed that garment for the better part of an hour; then, if it never became clean, I wouldn't have given it another souse.

After I squeezed the water out of it the best I could and hung it over the radiator to dry, I went down town to try on a perfectly lovely set of furs that were in Brown & Co.'s window.

There I met Molly Whitman and Tottie Franch and took them to the Sally-Ally Tea Room for something to eat; then I took them to the Strand to see Julian Eltinge in "Countess Charming." I wanted to see if I couldn't tell that he isn't a woman even if I didn't know it.

I dropped around to the office for Jack and we came home together.

We were hardly in the house before he give me the opening I wanted, by saying:

"Well, what have you been doing today, Hon?"

"Oh, I've got the biggest kind of a surprise for you, Jack; I've been getting behind the conservation board! I saved $1.75 this morning!"

"Pretty good for one morning. Can you keep up that pace for a year?"

Throwing my things on a chair as I passed, I seized the sweater from the radiator and held it up.

"See!" I exclaimed.

"What is it?" he inquired stupidly.

"Can't you see? It's my sweater! I washed it myself and saved $1.75!"

"Um—m—m. Isn't it a little large?"

"Large? No; it never was! It fits all right!" said I, proceeding to invest myself.

My arms were not long enough for the sleeves—by about a foot; but being busy wrinkling up the sleeves, I hadn't observed that Jack was having a fit or something; then I looked down at myself. It was right then that I was thankful that I hadn't used wool soap (the kind mamma used, you know), for whatever else happened to that sweater, I would not want to have deprived it of the amount it "shrunk." It was originally a fashionable length; it now escaped the floor by about nine inches. The pockets, which were normally placed, could now be observed as little sacks hanging near the bottom. And the belt! That was also normally placed, but now, if tied, would greatly interfere with locomotion.

I didn't care anything about the old sweater anyway; but there was Jack in fits of laughter; and it is so humiliating to have failed when one is striving to compete with an economical mother-in-law.

Well, I just stripped the old thing off and threw it in his face and started for the bedroom. Yes, I was crying, but hadn't my head half covered up with a pillow before Jack came, saying:

"There—there—Honey! She did try to economize—did try to save her old man $1.75! There—there—she can get her a new sweater—" and he tucked three yellow-backs in my hand.

When Milk Sours.

Milk will sour in any kind of warm and moist temperature, and because just before and during a thunderstorm the air is generally quite warm and moist, it is only natural that it should turn sour. It is wrong, however, to say or think that thunder makes milk sour. Thunder is only a noise, and noise cannot do anything but make itself heard. The fact that it is generally warm and moist, however, when it thunders, coupled with the fact that these conditions of the air sour milk very rapidly, has led people to connect the two in their minds and caused them to fall into the error of believing that the thunder is responsible for the change in the milk.

Not a Poultry Expert.

On board of his majesty's ships two seamen were hotly engaged in an argument as to the class of animal a hog belonged to, one of them asserting it was a sheep and the other equally certain it was a pig.

Not being able to agree, one of them turned to an old salt who was standing close by, saying:

"Here, Bill, you've knocked about a bit. What is a hog? Is it a pig or is it a sheep?"

Whereupon Bill, after due consideration, replied:

"Well, to tell you the truth, chummy, I don't know much about poultry."—London Tit-Bits.

Effect of Color on Soil.

To test the effect of color on soil and on vines, a specialist at the experimental vineyard in Montpelier, France, covered the ground with a thin layer of cement, leaving a small opening for each stem, and then painted portions of the cement white, black and red. Under the black and red the soil temperature rose much higher than under the white, giving nearly twice as much growth to the vines. The productive soils of the Midi, it is pointed out, are mostly reddish, and those of the vineyards of the Charentes are black.

Zest of a Fall Breakfast.

How these crisp, snappy days whet he appetite for sausage! And the best of it is it's patriotic to eat sausage as we don't ship fresh sausage to the boys. Good all the year 'round, farm sausage makes an ideal breakfast dish these sparkling mornings, just the food to supply that pep and energy to make things hum dollar-ward at the office. U. S. inspected pork, seasoned and blended with savory herbs and sweet spices are some of the many fine points that have opened the doors of the American pantry to quality prepared commercial sausage as the sausage par excellence. Add this delectable dish to your menu.

Potato Surprise—After paring potato, remove center with apple corer and press the fresh sausage meat into the opening. Bake 30 minutes in a hot oven, basting with drippings.

To cook farm style sausage so as to conserve all of the savory drippings, put the sausage links or meat into a cold skillet over the flame and allow o heat gradually, turning the meat frequently to prevent scorching. When sausage is nicely browned, pour the grease into a dish, straining it through a clean cheesecloth. Add a cup of boiling water to the sausage, cover lightly and let simmer. Serve on a hot platter. The drippings from sausage may be used for shortening purposes, for frying, or sauteing, as flavoring in soup, or as a foundation for gravies.

MISS WILSON SINGS OVERSEAS

President's Daughter, as a "Y" Entertainer, Will Make Trench Circuit.

Paris.—Miss Margaret Wilson, in a Y. M. C. A. overseas uniform, has arrived in France to sing for the soldiers in the huts of the Y. M. C. A., K. of C., Salvation Army and other centers and agencies of the United War Work campaign, as well as in hospitals and labor camps.

The President's daughter as a "Y" entertainer came booked for a full year in the trench and camp "circuit" of France, England and Italy. In her entertainment unit are Ross David, a tenor, her teacher for years, and Mrs. David, accompanist. They are using a portable organ.

A White House rehearsal, attended only by the President's family, preceded Miss Wilson's leaving America, when she gave the program she is to present to the American fighters in France. While in the war zone Miss Wilson will travel without show and with the desire to receive only those courtesies due any wearer of a Y. M. C. A. entertainer's uniform. It is not unlikely, however, that she will be presented to President Poincare, King George and Queen Mary, King Victor Emmanuel and military leaders.

Miss Wilson sang before American soldiers at nearly one hundred concerts in American training camps this year, at the request of Thomas S. McLane, chairman of the entertainment section of the Y. M. C. A. The fighting men who heard her in the United States carried to France glowing reports of her singing. This led to an insistent demand for the President's daughter to sing in the war zone.—From the New York Mail.

Public Notice

To any person that wants to make more money, come to Wyoming and buy you a farm where the crop in one year will pay for the land and where one acre put in potatoes will pay for five acres at the present price; where you and your family will be healthy and you are sure to prosper if you work and try like you have to in Missouri. Now I know what I am saying, as I lived here in good old Missouri for 18 years and always tried hard to get us a home, but when I left here three years ago I owed over $1,600.00 of debts here that I could not pay, but have paid them since I went to Wyoming. I am only telling you this to encourage you to come. We have good schools good churches, good water and climate, and as good people as you can find anywhere. I have land I can sell from $15.00 per acre up to $50.00 per acre. Close to two good railroads. Have got a 2,400 acre ranch at $25.00 per acre that is sure a bargain.

Now the first reason I want you to come to Wyoming is, because if you come and buy a farm I get a small commission out of it, but that is not the best reason. I know I will be doing you a favor and know you will always be glad you come. Now, in case some stranger to me should read this ad. I will give you as reference some of the best men in Nodaway County or any other county. In Parnell, James Barber, W. N. Morgan, C. C. Evans, A. J. Roof, Bill Jackson; Ravenwood, Mo., S. E. Wells, and V. O. Hunt; Barnard, Mo., George Cole, banker; Gaynor City, Mo., Charlie Lewis; Sheridan, Mo., C. C. Hall; Hopkins, Mo., Albert Mutti; Maryville, Mo., Nathaniel Sisson, U. S. Wright, Henry Wright, James Robinson. For any information about this county, if you can't see me when I am here, write me at Carpenter, Wyo. I took three men out with me two weeks ago and sold all three a farm. Would be glad to have you talk to any of these men: Cecil Talkington of Parnell or Elmer Talkington and Pete Mumford of Bedford, Iowa. We raise corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, speltz, flax, millet, cane and potatoes, alfalfa and good gardens. Poultry of all kinds do well. Stock of all kinds do well, especially hogs, as hog cholera is unknown.

The only way you can realize what a good county we have is to come and see it. For further information, write—

NERVOUS ENERGY.

The average healthy man, in the full possession of his mental and physical vigor, is cheerful and contented. Unfortunately, a really healthy individual is a rarity.

The conditions of modern life are so enormous that they exhaust the NERVOUS ENERGY and distress sleeplessness, worry and various other troubles, hence this unhealthy state.

MASKED VICTORY

By MONA DORR.

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Fred Osborne laughed as he lit a cigar. "But my dear Stewart, I don't want to marry simple little Della. She is a nice girl, but hardly my choice."

"Give that girl the advantages of those city dolls, and she would outshine them all," answered Stewart. "If I were younger I'd not be encouraging you."

A young girl passing through the corridor stifled the cry which rose to her lips as she heard the remarks of the two men.

She hurriedly entered her room, and, throwing herself on the bed, broke into sobs.

Miss Boynton (her hostess) had invited her, and other guests, to spend the week end at her beautiful country residence.

As she lay there, a plan suddenly formed in her mind; and hastily rising and bathing her eyes, she crossed the hall and knocked at the door.

"Come in," called a melodious voice. "Do sit down, I want to chat with you." Then as she noticed the girl's red lips. "Why, Della, what's the trouble?"

As Della confided her plan, the girl smiled and nodded from time to time.

"Just you wait!" cried Beatrice Lang. "We'll made them take notice," and she gave Della a big hug. Then they settled down to discuss the great secret.

The girls were very busy the next few days, planning for the masquerade ball, which the hostess was giving to close her entertainment.

At seven o'clock that evening Della entered Beatrice's room, and seated herself in a chair (placed for her) in front of the dressing table.

Beatrice first pulled the lace cap from her friend's head, revealing a mass of beautiful golden curls. This she piled up on the girl's head; then catching up a lovely pink gown, she passed it to her and told her to hurry into it.

Della took from a box a pair of pink satin slippers, and silk stockings, and putting them on, stood up for her friend's inspection.

"My dear!" exclaimed Beatrice. "No one would ever know you," and she turned the girl to the mirror.

"I'll do," she laughed, as a rosy flush spread over her face.

"Do!" Beatrice snapped. "If everyone doesn't pronounce you the belle of the ball I'll miss my guess."

She then picked up a mask and placing it over the girl's face, gave her a push saying: "Now, run along."

Meanwhile Della had reached the ballroom and was immediately claimed for the first dance, which was then about to commence.

As she whirled about, her eyes fell on a familiar figure.

"Who is that stunning-looking girl with Jack Morrill?" asked Fred Osborne of a youth standing near.

"Don't know," was the answer. "She is a beauty. But one can't recognize any of the girls in these confounded things they're wearing."

"Aren't you masking?" Beatrice was asked as she appeared.

"No," she answered. "I must be away in a short while."

Della was in her second dance, when a young man entered the room. He was rather effeminate, perhaps, but decidedly good-looking. Wandering about he at length came up to Fred Osborne.

"By Jove! What a beautiful girl!" he ejaculated. "Can you tell me who she is?"

"I couldn't," said Fred.

In some way the stranger so maneuvered that Fred obtained only the last two dances.

By this time his anger had reached the boiling point; but to all questions regarding the young man, Della answered by a light laugh.

At 11 o'clock came the call to unmask; as Della drew hers from her face, Fred looked at her in astonishment.

"Why! It's little Della," he cried.

"Yes, little Della," she returned. "But do look who is claiming your attention."

Fred turned and confronted the stranger, who had so puzzled him. Then, as his eyes rested on the face for a moment a hearty laugh broke from his lips.

"Well, Miss Lang," he cried, "that was one great joke on me."

Someone then spoke to Beatrice, and Fred drew Della out to the beautiful gardens.

There, in the lovely moonlight, he asked her to be his wife.

"But," the girl followed his question by another, "do you forget a certain conversation you held a short while ago?"

Fred thought for a moment, then said: "You can't mean the day Stewart and I were talking?"

"That is just what I mean," said Della.

"My dear," cried he, "will you forgive that thoughtless remark? For I tell you truly, I did not intend Stewart to have the impression you have formed.

"Darling," he continued, "won't you say 'yes,' and let me win forgiveness for the speech?"

He drew her gently to him, and as he looked into her eyes found his answer, even before her lips formed "yes."

If friends of Della Osborne speak truly—according to Fred's idea—there never was a more beautiful girl than his beloved wife.

REAL PEACEMAKER, THIS DOG

Human Fools Completely Cured of All Desire to Fight With Any Kind of Living Thing.

Three men in Brooklyn, neighbors and friends, were sent to St. Catherine's hospital recently suffering with dog bites, and were attended by the surgeons. The men were sitting in the back yard of the residence of one of them and got into an argument which turned into a free-for-all fight. The dog of one of the men, who was lying asleep, said to himself: "Is not this a pretty picture? Men have no right to make brutes of themselves; much less friends who have no reason for a difference. But since they really want to fight so badly I will teach them how to do the trick."

And so he rushed in and began to bite them terribly, not sparing his master. Stung with the pain, they turned from knocking each other to fight the dog; but he was too much for them, and cleaned out the crowd. Completely vanquished, the men made a break for a high fence and climbed upon that, but the dog chewed the calves of their legs till they pulled themselves up out of his reach atop the fence. The dog then went back to his corner as though saying to himself: "Now I guess they are cured. It will be a good while before they will disturb the peace of this neighborhood again, or disgrace my back yard." And they were cured, sure enough. All the fight was gnawed out of them. They did not want to fight each other, and from considerations of penitence and prudence they did not even want to fight the dog.

Sarah Orne Jewett to a Friend.

I had one most beautiful time which was after your own heart. It began to be light, and after spending some time half out of the window hearing one bird tune up after another, I half dressed myself and went out and stayed until it was bright daylight. I went up the street and out into the garden, where I had a beautiful time, and was neighborly with the hop-toads and with a joyful robin who was sitting on a corner of the barn, and I became very intimate with a big poppy which had made every arrangement to bloom as soon as the sun came up. There was a bright little waning moon over the hill, where I had a great mind to go, but there seemed to be difficulties, as I might be missed, or somebody might break into the house where I had broken out.—From "A Little Book of Friends" by Harriet Prescott Spofford.

Shrewd Fox.

Mr. Morgan in his book on the beaver gives the following instance on what he assures us is excellent authority: "A fox one night entered the henhouse of a farmer, and after destroying a large number of fowls, gorged himself to such repletion that he could not pass out through the small aperture by which he had entered. The proprietor found him in the morning sprawled out upon the floor apparently dead from surfeit; and taking him by the legs carried him out unsuspectingly, and for some distance to the side of his house, where he dropped him upon the grass. No sooner did Reynard find himself free than he sprang to his feet and made his escape."—S. J. Holmes.

GOOD GRAVEYARD AFTER THAT

A Few Broadsides From American Batteries Cured It of Its Bad Habit of Wandering.

This is a story of faith and what it accomplished. It was brought in to Paris by a dispatch-bearer and found its way into the Red Cross scrapbook over a cup of tea.

An American artillery detachment lay waiting for a report from the air scouts. All at once a message fell from the clouds: "Fire on moving graveyard."

What on earth did he mean? Was he joking? That particular airman was a born wag. Did he mean, perhaps, some body of enemy troops not yet visible? Off in the distance the crosses of a military graveyard were to be seen, quiescent and innocent under the afternoon sun. He could not possibly refer to that.

"Yes, by heaven!" said the officer in command. "I believe in that fellow. That's the only graveyard in sight. He must mean that."

He gave the order. The guns spoke. Great masses of smoke arose from the quiet graveyard and a loud series of explosions ensued.

Shortly afterward the airman alighted.

"Well, you did have faith in me," he said. "I wondered if you would think I was joking. I saw what looked like a military graveyard on the right of the road. A little later I looked down and it was on the left of the road. I couldn't believe my eyes, but I did, and flashed you the word. Rather a new dodge to get munitions up to the front!"

Pass Along Inspiring Words.

Miss Etta V. Leighton, civic secretary of the National Security league, has started a "Me and You" lip to lip, American propaganda. In this the plan is that for every Hun lie uttered there shall be spoken an American truth. The truths are embodied in slogans taken from President Wilson's speeches, General Pershing's messages, and from literature sent out by the committee on public information, the National Security league and other organizations.

Miss Leighton is also advising club women, teachers, and other groups to write the slogans on slips of paper and to inclose them in all letters sent to France and Italy, these slogans to be written in the language of the country for which they are intended, so that they can be handed to soldiers and civilians.

Would We Hesitate.

To many, perhaps, to most of us, saving in these times of high prices is difficult, and to get the money for a bond may mean some deprivation. So it is when some dear member of the family is sick unto death and the expense of medical advice and surgical skill and care is mounting to figures that it seems as if we could never meet. Do we hesitate? No; we pledge the last dollar and are glad to do it. How should we feel five years from now if we were to have locked in our hearts the knowledge that our mother country perished because we withheld the things that would have sustained her strength when she was fighting the powers of death and darkness?—Youth's Companion.

Chance for Daddy.

Richard watched his mother knitting socks for some time, then he looked up at his father, who was reading nearby and asked: "Daddy, don't you wish you were a soldier?" His father replied: "Yes. Why?" and Teddy said: "Caus den you could get all dose socks mother knits for other mans."

FIX PEACE "SLATE"

INFORMAL CONFERENCES OF FOREIGN MINISTERS BEING HELD

Regarded as Almost Certain Inter-Allied Council Will Be Held at the Famous City of Versailles.

Paris, Nov. 16.—Meetings beginning today of representatives of the associated governments will be largely of an informal nature. They will consist chiefly of conferences of foreign ministers rather than of premiers, with a view to reaching a common understanding on international questions and definitely arranging the program of the peace congress.

Versailles, although not formally chosen as the meeting place of the peace negotiations, is regarded as almost certain to be the place selected for the peace conference when the inter-Allied council reassembled today. The real work of the negotiations will be carried on in Paris, where it is probable that delegations from all the countries will reside temporarily, the members going out to Versailles now and then for plenary sessions of the conference.

There also is little doubt that the supreme act of signing the peace agreement will take place at Versailles in the same historical hall where the German empire was proclaimed in 1871.

Versailles, or rather the palace there, has played an important part in the histories of France, Germany, Great Britain and the United States. In 1783 the armistice preliminary to the treaty of peace between Great Britain and the United States was signed at Versailles. Six years later the palace was the scene of important events in the French revolution. The German army besieging Paris had its headquarters in the town in 1870-71, and there the negotiations between France and Germany were discussed. After the peace Versailles was the seat of the French national assembly and for a few years thereafter was the official capital of France.

Is Historic Place.

The town of Versailles, twelve miles west-southwest of Paris, is not attractive in itself, but the presence there of the palace built by Louis XIV and its proximity to the capital and the gardens which, with the fountains and waterworks, are one of the glories of the place, were planned by Le Notre. All estimates of the cost of the buildings and gardens are vague, but some experts estimate that more than $100,000,000 was spent by Louis XIV, who destroyed the accounts.

In the French revolution, Louis XIV and Marie Antoinette were forcibly removed to Paris, after which the furniture was destroyed. Napoleon and the kings during the restoration barely kept the place in repair, but Louis Philippe restored the palace and made it a museum of works of art, illustrative of the history of France, at a cost of nearly $5,000,000.

Then Maryville got down to business and walked through easily for a touch-down. DeArmond carried the ball over. Maryville kicked to Savannah. Game ended.

With more than half the team having been injured, M. H. S. was not up to usual form. Capt. Pierpoint played a good game with DeArmond putting over some brilliant plays, gaining every time he got the ball. Savannah couldn't see much but Pierpoint, but "Tubby" trotted around the ends a number of times. Foreman, M. H. S.'s line plunger, was not up to his usual form.

NINE PROTESTANT CHURCHES TO CONFER WITH PRESBYTERIANS

'A WISE MOVE'-REV. COILE

Maryville Pastor Points Results of Unified Command in War as Worth Attention of the Church.

Announcement was made yesterday in the Metropolitan press of the country that committees from nine of the leading Protestant denominations of the United States will meet in Philadelphia December 3-6 to take the first steps toward the "organic union of the evangelical churches in America." These nine have accepted the invitation extended by the Presbyterian church to all evangelical churches to a convention for working out a plan to make one federated church of all these denominations.

The denominations which will be represented at the conference are the Presbyterian church, Protestant Episcopal church, Reformed church United Presbyterian church, Methodist Episcopal church, Congregational churches Disciples of Christ, Evangelical Synod of North America and Moravian church

With several Maryville denominations interested in the question of church union Dr. S. A. Coile of the Presbyterian church was asked this morning for an expression in the matter. Dr. Coile said:

"This is one of the most important movements in America today, a first result of unified thought, feeling and life, brought about by the great war. The war was won only when the Allied armies were placed under unified command. Its results are to be conserved by plans of unified statesmanship. The churches of Protestant America will be wise as they follow the pathway so plainly pointed out by every other movement, national or international, economic or social, secular or religious having for its object the influencing or the welfare of any large part of humanity.

"It is hoped, however, that as progress is made others will join in, until the result will be the practical reunion of the Protestant evangelical churches of America.

"Three of our local churches are especially interested in this movement. One has only to consider for a moment to realize the mighty force for righteousness in Maryville and Nodaway county which would lie in one great church composed of these three with a great preacher, an efficient organization and the financial strength to enable it to do anything which God's spirit might move it to undertake."

MEN OUT SOON, NOW

DEMOBILIZATION OF ARMY IN THE CAMPS IN NINE STAGES

MARCH ANNOUNCES PLAN

First To Be Discharged Will Be Development Battalions With Combatants Last.—200,000 Out in Two Weeks.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The war department's plan for demobilizing the 1,700,000 men in the camps and cantonments of the country was outlined today by General March, chief of staff.

The demobilization will be made in nine stages. The first to be discharged will be the development batallions, of which there are seventy-one, carrying more than 98,000 men.

Next to be discharged will be the spruce production division with several thousand men in northern lumber fields. Then will come the demobilization of the members of the Central Training School. The United States Guards, of which there are 135,000 will follow.

The sixth lot to be discharged will be the railroad divisions followed by the depot brigades and the replacement divisions with the combatant divisions last of all.

It will take some time to muster these men out, General March explained, but he already has the machinery in motion and expected to discharge some 200,000 men in the course of the next two weeks.

Before being mustered out every man will be subjected to physical examination and it will be necessary to check up his status with the bureau of war risk insurance.

Over Seas for Freedom.

LET us be glad together that the passionate love of freedom that made the Pilgrim Fathers set sail in fragile ships to brave the unknown terrors of the inhospitable New England coast is driving us back over the seas in dreadnaughts to face the known horrors of modern warfare.

When that spirit dies there can be no more thanksgiving in America. As long as this spirit lives it is always Thanksgiving day, whatever happens, or whatever we may have or may not have for dinner.

Let us give thanks that years of prosperity and fatness, years of peace and security, have not served to make us entirely forgot that unless we love freedom more than life, we are already as one dead; unless we know the difference between real peace and selfish security, we are already a conquered people.

Let us give thanks for our strength, our wealth and our opportunities garnered under the protection of even a dawning democracy, and for the chance to pour them out without stint for the spread of democracy to every corner of our world.

ANNE LEWIS PIERCE

CUSTOM AN OLD ONE

Pages of History Filled With Record of Days Set Aside for Giving Thanks.

THE idea is prevalent throughout the United States that our Thanksgiving day is peculiarly an American custom of New England origin. This is true in part only. The general observance through many years of a set day on which to give thanks to Almighty God for his blessings has made the custom distinctively American; but its origin long antedates the settlement of this western continent and we must look elsewhere for it.

In old Egypt, when the harvest had been gathered, it was the custom to observe a day of feasting and to lay offerings upon the altars of Isis, the goddess of agriculture. The Jewish festival was the "Ingathering," or the "Feast of the Tabernacle," mentioned in Exodus and other parts of the Old Testament. This was more particularly a thanksgiving for the fruit harvest, but as it came at the close of the entire harvest it probably was intended also as a general thanksgiving "for the bounty of nature."

The goddess of the Roman harvest was Ceres. Her festival was celebrated annually and was called Ceralia. It was a day of worship and rustic sports. Men and women formed processions and went to the fields with music.

In one way or another, a Thanksgiving day had been observed in Christian Europe for centuries before its celebration in New England. The early Christians kept such days as the bishops named them within their jurisdiction. On the continent, and for a time in England, it occurred at Martinmas, which was a day of feasting and drinking. Occasionally, too, civic authorities recommended the observance of some fixed day.

Real Day of Thanksgiving.

There is a difference between being thankful and having a good time. One can enjoy an elaborate dinner and the meeting of friends without any uplift of the heart to the Giver of all good. Make Thanksgiving more than a jolly day, a day of festivity and good cheer and friendly companionship. Put aside a portion of it for real Thanksgiving to him to whom your thanks are due.

A reader of this column asks "what is a 'kilowatt' as used by the electric company. We are glad to give the information. A kilowatt is a cross between a buzz saw and cockle burr. It resembles a wart and in warm weather it smells like a Hun. It has a habit of swelling out like a quart of rice in a pint cooking vessel. It is a cousin to the water meter. The latter has a habit of slopping over. It has been known when detached for repairs, to measure up 6,000,000 gallons while being taken to the repair shop. Still a kilowatt is a handy thing to have in a family where milk is scarce. It can also be used as a tack hammer in putting down carpets. It is not a safe thing for the baby to play with and keep it out of reach of the cat.

HOW RHEUMATISM BEGINS

The excruciating agonies of rheumatism are usually the result of failure of the kidneys to expel poisons from the system. In a majority of cases rheumatism is an indication that uric acid has pervaded the system. If the irritation of these uric acid crystals is allowed to continue, incurable bladder or kidney disease may result. Attend to it at once. Don't resort to temporary relief. The sick kidneys must be restored to health by the use of some sterling remedy which will prevent a return of the disease.

They will attack the poisons at once, clear out the kidneys and urinary tract and the soothing healing oils and herbs will restore the inflamed tissues and organs to normal health.

Eating for Health.

Observance of the principles of right eating is the very keystone of health.

By a well regulated natural life, we can keep our bodies in such a condition that they will resist disease.

Four-fifths of all disease is caused primarily by either over-eating or eating wrong combinations of food.

Over-eating causes the formation in the system of uric acid, ptomaine and other poisonous compounds.

It is the accumulation of these poisons in the body that makes one feel tired and fatigued; also produces a nervous, irritable, debilitated condition.

When food is properly masticated, the inclination to over-eat is prevented.

The practice of eating hurriedly and washing down food by liquids, without proper mastication, is a great weakness of the American people.

The quantity of food required by the body is regulated by physical activity.

Therefore, he who seeks health should not eat a lumberjack's ration, when he follows a sedentary occupation.—By Dr. Lorne A. Summers.

HINDENBURG CALLS ON ARMY

Declares He Will Not Abandon Troops in Crisis and Demands Faithfulness.

Berlin, Nov. 16.—via Basel, Nov. 14.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg has issued a proclamation to the German army saying in substance:

"The ever growing number of our enemies, the exhaustion of our Allies and the urgent crisis in the provisioning of our country have forced us to accept the hard conditions of the armistice. By the terms of the armistice we are obliged to rapidly return to the fatherland, which is a heavy task.

"You will never be abandoned by your field marshal in the struggle. He will ever be confident in you."

The order of the field marshal reads:

"To all, and especially the army group under Field Marshal von Mackensen (in Rumania) I remain as hitherto the head of the supreme army command in order to lead the troops home in order and discipline. I expect the command, staffs, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men to continue to do their duty. This is to be made known to all the troops."

What Did He Do For Denver?

The late Senator Tabor built the Tabor Grand opera house at Denver some 30 years ago. He employed an Italian artist to decorate the interior, with the understanding that he (Tabor) was not to enter the theater until the work was completed. Over the center of the proscenium was a picture of Shakespeare.

On the tour of inspection in company with the artist, Senator Tabor said: "Whose picture is that?" The artist replied: "Shakespeare." "Shak espeare! What in hell did he ever do for Denver? You paint him out and paint me in."—From Portland Oregonian.

MISS WILSON SINGS OVERSEAS

President's Daughter, as a "Y" Entertainer, Will Make Trench Circuit.

Paris.—Miss Margaret Wilson, in a Y. M. C. A. overseas uniform, has arrived in France to sing for the soldiers in the huts of the Y. M. C. A., K. of C., Salvation Army and other centers and agencies of the United War Work campaign, as well as in hospitals and labor camps.

The President's daughter as a "Y" entertainer came booked for a full year in the trench and camp "circuit" of France, England and Italy. In her entertainment unit are Ross David, a tenor, her teacher for years, and Mrs. David, accompanist. They are using a portable organ.

A White House rehearsal, attended only by the President's family, preceded Miss Wilson's leaving America, when she gave the program she is to present to the American fighters in France. While in the war zone Miss Wilson will travel without show and with the desire to receive only those courtesies due any wearer of a Y. M. C. A. entertainer's uniform. It is not unlikely, however, that she will be presented to President Poincare, King George and Queen Mary, King Victor Emmanuel and military leaders.

Miss Wilson sang before American soldiers at nearly one hundred concerts in American training camps this year, at the request of Thomas S. McLane, chairman of the entertainment section of the Y. M. C. A. The fighting men who heard her in the United States carried to France glowing reports of her singing. This led to an insistent demand for the President's daughter to sing in the war zone.—From the New York Mail.

Censored.

The troubles of a society editor in a small city are reflected in the following item which appeared in a Brazil, (Ind.) newspaper.

Miss Cleopatra Grub entertained at bridge whist and dancing yesterday afternoon. The first prize in cards was won by Miss————(censored because she is leader of the Methodist choir). The second prize was captured by Miss————(Kept out because she teaches in the public schools). Consolation prize was taken by Miss———(Kept out by special request. Her mother objects to cards).

Among those present were Miss——(Kept out because of death in family recently), Miss ————(censored because her employer objects to dancing), Miss——— (omitted by request. She had refused another invitation for the same afternoon, and really it would be quite embarassing if hostess No. 1 were to 'catch on'), and Mrs. ———(husband is out of work and she does not want to appear extravagant.)

JACK'S MOTHER

By ROSE HOLMES.

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Of course, Jack is the dearest fellow in the world, but he often refers to his mother's efficiency. Jack's mother is efficient. I'll admit it. I would also call her stin—economical.

Since the slogan "Get Behind Hoover" has become popular it seems to me that Jack has referred more frequently to the efficiency of his mother; has several times intimated that saving a little on living expenses would be a laudable ambition for me. This idea was put in words that I understood, when he said:

"My dear, I think $45 too much for you to spend on a hat this season."

So I didn't spend it. I got a perfectly-good-enough best hat for $35, and in order to make it last longer I got one that was all right for everyday for $20.

But that isn't what I started to tell you about. You see, we go over to Jack's mother's for dinner on her birthday, and this year was to be no exception.

I knew she would show us her preserves and pickles and cans of things; and her last winter's suit that she had made as good as new with the addition of new collar and cuffs.

And I happened to think that my sweater was dirty, and that I would want to wear it under my coat if we motored over; and also happened to think that the fact that it was dirty would not escape efficiency's eye.

Well, cleaning is expensive, and didn't Jack want me to economize? Hadn't I paid the most reliable cleaning establishment in Boston $1.75 plus expressage, for cleaning that same sweater not long ago?—a perfectly exorbitant price; why, the sweater only cost $12.50 in the first place. No, it wasn't one of those expensive hand-knit ones, but it was a very pretty sweater. Yes, that soft rose one you have seen me wear.

They say "a penny saved is a penny earned," so I decided that I couldn't earn $1.75 any easier than to wash that sweater myself, with about five cents' worth of soap.

Did you ever try to wash anything? We've always sent the washing out, so haven't any tubs or wringers or things, but there was a bathtub. I believe one of the helps to efficiency is being able to utilize the things.

It takes a lot of energy to get up a suds in a bathtub, if you are not on the inside.

Do you know how much a sweater weighs when it's wet?

I soaped and rubbed and squeezed that garment for the better part of an hour; then, if it never became clean, I wouldn't have given it another souse.

After I squeezed the water out of it the best I could and hung it over the radiator to dry, I went down town to try on a perfectly lovely set of furs that were in Brown & Co.'s window.

There I met Molly Whitman and Tottie Franch and took them to the Sally-Ally Tea Room for something to eat; then I took them to the Strand to see Julian Eltinge in "Countess Charming." I wanted to see if I couldn't tell that he isn't a woman even if I didn't know it.

I dropped around to the office for Jack and we came home together.

We were hardly in the house before he give me the opening I wanted, by saying:

"Well, what have you been doing today, Hon?"

"Oh, I've got the biggest kind of a surprise for you, Jack; I've been getting behind the conservation board! I saved $1.75 this morning!"

"Pretty good for one morning. Can you keep up that pace for a year?"

Throwing my things on a chair as I passed, I seized the sweater from the radiator and held it up.

"See!" I exclaimed.

"What is it?" he inquired stupidly.

"Can't you see? It's my sweater! I washed it myself and saved $1.75!"

"Um—m—m. Isn't it a little large?"

"Large? No; it never was! It fits all right!" said I, proceeding to invest myself.

My arms were not long enough for the sleeves—by about a foot; but being busy wrinkling up the sleeves, I hadn't observed that Jack was having a fit or something; then I looked down at myself. It was right then that I was thankful that I hadn't used wool soap (the kind mamma used, you know), for whatever else happened to that sweater, I would not want to have deprived it of the amount it "shrunk." It was originally a fashionable length; it now escaped the floor by about nine inches. The pockets, which were normally placed, could now be observed as little sacks hanging near the bottom. And the belt! That was also normally placed, but now, if tied, would greatly interfere with locomotion.

I didn't care anything about the old sweater anyway; but there was Jack in fits of laughter; and it is so humiliating to have failed when one is striving to compete with an economical mother-in-law.

Well, I just stripped the old thing off and threw it in his face and started for the bedroom. Yes, I was crying, but hadn't my head half covered up with a pillow before Jack came, saying:

"There—there—Honey! She did try to economize—did try to save her old man $1.75! There—there—she can get her a new sweater—" and he tucked three yellow-backs in my hand.

When Milk Sours.

Milk will sour in any kind of warm and moist temperature, and because just before and during a thunderstorm the air is generally quite warm and moist, it is only natural that it should turn sour. It is wrong, however, to say or think that thunder makes milk sour. Thunder is only a noise, and noise cannot do anything but make itself heard. The fact that it is generally warm and moist, however, when it thunders, coupled with the fact that these conditions of the air sour milk very rapidly, has led people to connect the two in their minds and caused them to fall into the error of believing that the thunder is responsible for the change in the milk.

Not a Poultry Expert.

On board of his majesty's ships two seamen were hotly engaged in an argument as to the class of animal a hog belonged to, one of them asserting it was a sheep and the other equally certain it was a pig.

Not being able to agree, one of them turned to an old salt who was standing close by, saying:

"Here, Bill, you've knocked about a bit. What is a hog? Is it a pig or is it a sheep?"

Whereupon Bill, after due consideration, replied:

"Well, to tell you the truth, chummy, I don't know much about poultry."—London Tit-Bits.

Effect of Color on Soil.

To test the effect of color on soil and on vines, a specialist at the experimental vineyard in Montpelier, France, covered the ground with a thin layer of cement, leaving a small opening for each stem, and then painted portions of the cement white, black and red. Under the black and red the soil temperature rose much higher than under the white, giving nearly twice as much growth to the vines. The productive soils of the Midi, it is pointed out, are mostly reddish, and those of the vineyards of the Charentes are black.

Zest of a Fall Breakfast.

How these crisp, snappy days whet he appetite for sausage! And the best of it is it's patriotic to eat sausage as we don't ship fresh sausage to the boys. Good all the year 'round, farm sausage makes an ideal breakfast dish these sparkling mornings, just the food to supply that pep and energy to make things hum dollar-ward at the office. U. S. inspected pork, seasoned and blended with savory herbs and sweet spices are some of the many fine points that have opened the doors of the American pantry to quality prepared commercial sausage as the sausage par excellence. Add this delectable dish to your menu.

Potato Surprise—After paring potato, remove center with apple corer and press the fresh sausage meat into the opening. Bake 30 minutes in a hot oven, basting with drippings.

To cook farm style sausage so as to conserve all of the savory drippings, put the sausage links or meat into a cold skillet over the flame and allow o heat gradually, turning the meat frequently to prevent scorching. When sausage is nicely browned, pour the grease into a dish, straining it through a clean cheesecloth. Add a cup of boiling water to the sausage, cover lightly and let simmer. Serve on a hot platter. The drippings from sausage may be used for shortening purposes, for frying, or sauteing, as flavoring in soup, or as a foundation for gravies.

To any person that wants to make more money, come to Wyoming and buy you a farm where the crop in one year will pay for the land and where one acre put in potatoes will pay for five acres at the present price; where you and your family will be healthy and you are sure to prosper if you work and try like you have to in Missouri. Now I know what I am saying, as I lived here in good old Missouri for 18 years and always tried hard to get us a home, but when I left here three years ago I owed over $1,600.00 of debts here that I could not pay, but have paid them since I went to Wyoming. I am only telling you this to encourage you to come. We have good schools good churches, good water and climate, and as good people as you can find anywhere. I have land I can sell from $15.00 per acre up to $50.00 per acre. Close to two good railroads. Have got a 2,400 acre ranch at $25.00 per acre that is sure a bargain.

Now the first reason I want you to come to Wyoming is, because if you come and buy a farm I get a small commission out of it, but that is not the best reason. I know I will be doing you a favor and know you will always be glad you come. Now, in case some stranger to me should read this ad. I will give you as reference some of the best men in Nodaway County or any other county. In Parnell, James Barber, W. N. Morgan, C. C. Evans, A. J. Roof, Bill Jackson; Ravenwood, Mo., S. E. Wells, and V. O. Hunt; Barnard, Mo., George Cole, banker; Gaynor City, Mo., Charlie Lewis; Sheridan, Mo., C. C. Hall; Hopkins, Mo., Albert Mutti; Maryville, Mo., Nathaniel Sisson, U. S. Wright, Henry Wright, James Robinson. For any information about this county, if you can't see me when I am here, write me at Carpenter, Wyo. I took three men out with me two weeks ago and sold all three a farm. Would be glad to have you talk to any of these men: Cecil Talkington of Parnell or Elmer Talkington and Pete Mumford of Bedford, Iowa. We raise corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, speltz, flax, millet, cane and potatoes, alfalfa and good gardens. Poultry of all kinds do well. Stock of all kinds do well, especially hogs, as hog cholera is unknown.

The only way you can realize what a good county we have is to come and see it. For further information, write—

MASKED VICTORY

By MONA DORR.

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Fred Osborne laughed as he lit a cigar. "But my dear Stewart, I don't want to marry simple little Della. She is a nice girl, but hardly my choice."

"Give that girl the advantages of those city dolls, and she would outshine them all," answered Stewart. "If I were younger I'd not be encouraging you."

A young girl passing through the corridor stifled the cry which rose to her lips as she heard the remarks of the two men.

She hurriedly entered her room, and, throwing herself on the bed, broke into sobs.

Miss Boynton (her hostess) had invited her, and other guests, to spend the week end at her beautiful country residence.

As she lay there, a plan suddenly formed in her mind; and hastily rising and bathing her eyes, she crossed the hall and knocked at the door.

"Come in," called a melodious voice. "Do sit down, I want to chat with you." Then as she noticed the girl's red lips. "Why, Della, what's the trouble?"

As Della confided her plan, the girl smiled and nodded from time to time.

"Just you wait!" cried Beatrice Lang. "We'll made them take notice," and she gave Della a big hug. Then they settled down to discuss the great secret.

The girls were very busy the next few days, planning for the masquerade ball, which the hostess was giving to close her entertainment.

At seven o'clock that evening Della entered Beatrice's room, and seated herself in a chair (placed for her) in front of the dressing table.

Beatrice first pulled the lace cap from her friend's head, revealing a mass of beautiful golden curls. This she piled up on the girl's head; then catching up a lovely pink gown, she passed it to her and told her to hurry into it.

Della took from a box a pair of pink satin slippers, and silk stockings, and putting them on, stood up for her friend's inspection.

"My dear!" exclaimed Beatrice. "No one would ever know you," and she turned the girl to the mirror.

"I'll do," she laughed, as a rosy flush spread over her face.

"Do!" Beatrice snapped. "If everyone doesn't pronounce you the belle of the ball I'll miss my guess."

She then picked up a mask and placing it over the girl's face, gave her a push saying: "Now, run along."

Meanwhile Della had reached the ballroom and was immediately claimed for the first dance, which was then about to commence.

As she whirled about, her eyes fell on a familiar figure.

"Who is that stunning-looking girl with Jack Morrill?" asked Fred Osborne of a youth standing near.

"Don't know," was the answer. "She is a beauty. But one can't recognize any of the girls in these confounded things they're wearing."

"Aren't you masking?" Beatrice was asked as she appeared.

"No," she answered. "I must be away in a short while."

Della was in her second dance, when a young man entered the room. He was rather effeminate, perhaps, but decidedly good-looking. Wandering about he at length came up to Fred Osborne.

"By Jove! What a beautiful girl!" he ejaculated. "Can you tell me who she is?"

"I couldn't," said Fred.

In some way the stranger so maneuvered that Fred obtained only the last two dances.

By this time his anger had reached the boiling point; but to all questions regarding the young man, Della answered by a light laugh.

At 11 o'clock came the call to unmask; as Della drew hers from her face, Fred looked at her in astonishment.

"Why! It's little Della," he cried.

"Yes, little Della," she returned. "But do look who is claiming your attention."

Fred turned and confronted the stranger, who had so puzzled him. Then, as his eyes rested on the face for a moment a hearty laugh broke from his lips.

"Well, Miss Lang," he cried, "that was one great joke on me."

Someone then spoke to Beatrice, and Fred drew Della out to the beautiful gardens.

There, in the lovely moonlight, he asked her to be his wife.

"But," the girl followed his question by another, "do you forget a certain conversation you held a short while ago?"

Fred thought for a moment, then said: "You can't mean the day Stewart and I were talking?"

"That is just what I mean," said Della.

"My dear," cried he, "will you forgive that thoughtless remark? For I tell you truly, I did not intend Stewart to have the impression you have formed.

"Darling," he continued, "won't you say 'yes,' and let me win forgiveness for the speech?"

He drew her gently to him, and as he looked into her eyes found his answer, even before her lips formed "yes."

If friends of Della Osborne speak truly—according to Fred's idea—there never was a more beautiful girl than his beloved wife.

REAL PEACEMAKER, THIS DOG

Human Fools Completely Cured of All Desire to Fight With Any Kind of Living Thing.

Three men in Brooklyn, neighbors and friends, were sent to St. Catherine's hospital recently suffering with dog bites, and were attended by the surgeons. The men were sitting in the back yard of the residence of one of them and got into an argument which turned into a free-for-all fight. The dog of one of the men, who was lying asleep, said to himself: "Is not this a pretty picture? Men have no right to make brutes of themselves; much less friends who have no reason for a difference. But since they really want to fight so badly I will teach them how to do the trick."

And so he rushed in and began to bite them terribly, not sparing his master. Stung with the pain, they turned from knocking each other to fight the dog; but he was too much for them, and cleaned out the crowd. Completely vanquished, the men made a break for a high fence and climbed upon that, but the dog chewed the calves of their legs till they pulled themselves up out of his reach atop the fence. The dog then went back to his corner as though saying to himself: "Now I guess they are cured. It will be a good while before they will disturb the peace of this neighborhood again, or disgrace my back yard." And they were cured, sure enough. All the fight was gnawed out of them. They did not want to fight each other, and from considerations of penitence and prudence they did not even want to fight the dog.

Sarah Orne Jewett to a Friend.

I had one most beautiful time which was after your own heart. It began to be light, and after spending some time half out of the window hearing one bird tune up after another, I half dressed myself and went out and stayed until it was bright daylight. I went up the street and out into the garden, where I had a beautiful time, and was neighborly with the hop-toads and with a joyful robin who was sitting on a corner of the barn, and I became very intimate with a big poppy which had made every arrangement to bloom as soon as the sun came up. There was a bright little waning moon over the hill, where I had a great mind to go, but there seemed to be difficulties, as I might be missed, or somebody might break into the house where I had broken out.—From "A Little Book of Friends" by Harriet Prescott Spofford.

Shrewd Fox.

Mr. Morgan in his book on the beaver gives the following instance on what he assures us is excellent authority: "A fox one night entered the henhouse of a farmer, and after destroying a large number of fowls, gorged himself to such repletion that he could not pass out through the small aperture by which he had entered. The proprietor found him in the morning sprawled out upon the floor apparently dead from surfeit; and taking him by the legs carried him out unsuspectingly, and for some distance to the side of his house, where he dropped him upon the grass. No sooner did Reynard find himself free than he sprang to his feet and made his escape."—S. J. Holmes.

GOOD GRAVEYARD AFTER THAT

A Few Broadsides From American Batteries Cured It of Its Bad Habit of Wandering.

This is a story of faith and what it accomplished. It was brought in to Paris by a dispatch-bearer and found its way into the Red Cross scrapbook over a cup of tea.

An American artillery detachment lay waiting for a report from the air scouts. All at once a message fell from the clouds: "Fire on moving graveyard."

What on earth did he mean? Was he joking? That particular airman was a born wag. Did he mean, perhaps, some body of enemy troops not yet visible? Off in the distance the crosses of a military graveyard were to be seen, quiescent and innocent under the afternoon sun. He could not possibly refer to that.

"Yes, by heaven!" said the officer in command. "I believe in that fellow. That's the only graveyard in sight. He must mean that."

He gave the order. The guns spoke. Great masses of smoke arose from the quiet graveyard and a loud series of explosions ensued.

Shortly afterward the airman alighted.

"Well, you did have faith in me," he said. "I wondered if you would think I was joking. I saw what looked like a military graveyard on the right of the road. A little later I looked down and it was on the left of the road. I couldn't believe my eyes, but I did, and flashed you the word. Rather a new dodge to get munitions up to the front!"

Pass Along Inspiring Words.

Miss Edna V. Leighton, civic secretary of the National Security league, has started a "Me and You" tip to tip American propaganda. In this the plan is that for every Hun lie uttered there shall be spoken an American truth. The truths are embodied in slogans taken from President Wilson's speeches, General Pershing's messages and from literature sent out by the committee on public information, the National Security league and other organizations.

Miss Leighton is also advising club women, teachers, and other groups to write the slogans on slips of paper and to inclose them in all letters sent to France and Italy, these slogans to be written in the language of the country for which they are intended, so that they can be handed to soldiers and civilians.

Would We Hesitate.

To many, perhaps, to most of us, saving in these times of high prices is difficult, and to get the money for a bond may mean some deprivation. So it is when some dear member of the family is sick unto death and the expense of medical advice and surgical skill and care is mounting to figures that it seems as if we could never meet. Do we hesitate? No; we pledge the last dollar and are glad to do it. How should we feel five years from now if we were to have locked in our hearts the knowledge that our mother country perished because we withheld the things that would have sustained her strength when she was fighting the powers of death and darkness?—Youth's Companion.

Chance for Daddy.

Richard watched his mother knitting socks for some time, then he looked up at his father, who was reading nearby and asked: "Daddy, don't you wish you were a soldier?" His father replied: "Yes. Why?" and Teddy said: "Caus den you could get all dose socks mother knits for other mans."
